

Bypassing Privacy Notifications

Depending on the resource you may occasionally see a popup like this when you are trying to access a library e-resource through library.jewell.edu:

Typically, messages like this appear for a site that does not have a proper security certification for their website address (the “s” in https). For our sites it appears to be an issue with the proxy tool we use to connect library patrons to different databases.

The databases themselves and the library site are both secure, and we’re currently investigating how to change our proxy hosting so this issue may be resolved.

In the meantime, depending on the browser you're using there should be a click through option to continue to the site. In the image above, clicking on the Show Details option, then click on the visit this website link.

If you're unable to find the option in your browser or have further questions, please contact Peter Johnson (Access Services and Resource Librarian).
